

The Africa Habitat Review Journal strives to impart knowledge and facilitate exchange of ideas among stakeholders in the built environment to keep abreast of new technology, research and development so that they can improve the efficiency and effectiveness of their services. Further, it is intended to enable both academicians and non-academicians in the built environment to publish, lobby and influence policy formulation. The Journal links theory and practice in the built environment within the Kenyan, regional and International context.

Contributions: Contributors are requested to refer to the Guidelines for Authors and the Editorial Policy printed at the end of the journal. Those wishing to contribute in the journal can submit four copies of their article to the editor, Prof. Robert Rukwaro at the address below.
